A WORD FROM OUR TUTORS

"Hey, I'm Anthony. I've got a PhD in Physics and I've been a tutor with Headway Tutors for two and a half years. My approach to tutoring is to see each student as an individual with their own needs. I aim to help students understand subjects in a way they hadn't really thought of before, and in that way, helping to build confidence in their abilities."

What is your favourite part about tutoring?

"One of my proudest moments was creating enough curiosity in a student that he decided to apply for a degree in Physics – despite not being interested in the subject at all when we first started!"

Would you recommend Headway Tutors to other tutors?

"Headway Tutors is a great company to work for – they are excellent at finding me interesting jobs that I really want and are always there to support me if I have any questions or problems. They are flexible with how they work, both Chris and Ross are very down to Earth and relate to their tutors in a personal manner. The logistical side is very good: they are clear about payment dates and times, good at resolving issues and great with communication. I honestly couldn't recommend them enough!"

Hey, I'm Sara.

During my undergrad, I was lucky enough to spend a year abroad in France where I taught English to small groups of French students. On my return to the UK, I completed a TEFL course and started to take on some private students who were learning English as a foreign language, as well as those who wanted to do French GCSEs.

What is your favourite part about tutoring?

I find one-to-one teaching very rewarding – both for me and for the student. I really enjoy watching their progress and it's great to have direct feedback from the parents. One student I worked with starting off really struggling to read; now she asks for a copy of the books we are reading to share with her siblings.

I've already been recommending them to friends!

They are so supportive and it's great to work for an agency who finds clients that match your interests. They are always happy to help with my timetable and to move students around if need be, so that it is comfortable for my travel needs. They are very helpful with providing guidance on where to find resources as they don't want you to have to do extra work. I also really enjoy using Pogo, their online system, which helps me to keep track of my students and offer feedback to parents.
